STEAMBOAT SONATA IN C-G

Annual Picnic of Local Carriers Made Joyous History—They Liked Vinal Haven

"Make me a boy again" was the prayer of the scores of passengers Sunday on Steamer W. S. White as they watched the members of the C. G. Club, 14 strong, in the joyous process of putting over their annual "steamboat picnic." Smiling skies, tranquil seas and a most contagious sort of friendliness conspired to make the affair the best in the club's series.

At club meeting, held mid-day, the members learned of the heroic part played by Capt. Lester Kent of the White in the dramatic rescue of passengers from the ill-fated steamer Castine and Capt. Kent assured his place in their youthful hall of fame by treating them to the pleasure of sailing the outside route via Heron Neck Light, and there many of the boys had their first glimpse of the open sea and caught with unqualified delight the deep roll of the ocean swell and felt its sharp, penetrating breath.

At Vinal Haven the boys experienced the famous island hospitality which took such practical forms as donated hot dogs, the use of two row-boats, inspection of the Vinal-Haven Light and Power Co. plant and a free trip to the Fish Wharf. Picnic lunch was enjoyed either aboard ship or at delightful Smith's Point, a stone's throw away, supplemented by numerous ice creams, hamburgers, etc.

Meantime the club's "Big Brother" had worn himself to a mere shadow by such arduous duties as the consideration of a perfectly gorgeous lobster dinner at beautiful Rockaway Inn, sight seeing in Charlie Bowman's Chevrolet and reading the September American in the cool and salty shade of Smith Point spruces.

On the homeward trip Doc Sanborn appeared with a bird dog which shared honors with a rollicking baby in a trick sort of jumper. The boys expressed in no uncertain terms their approval of this trappy new W. S. White. Two years ago, aboard Steamer North Haven, the club was vocal as their steamer edged out the White in the Bay crossing. Last year, aboard the White, they changed the subject dismally as the sturdy North Haven left them behind. But Sunday the new White, engines turning up smoothly as a well kept watch, romped away from their unhappy sister ship while the club boys suggestively held tow lines over the stern.

Another C. G. Club Steamboat Picnic is now long-to-be-remembered history and the wonder of it is that many more citizens do not avail themselves of these magnificent Sunday and week day excursions offered by these splendid steamers. The Club disembarked with vigorous appreciation to Capt. Kent, the ever friendly Purser Fred Roberts, capable Engineer Bucklin who was given personal credit for the boat's fine performance, and smiling Ned Kessel who always did get credit for everything (good or bad) which happened around "the bots."

A REPUBLICAN DRIVE

Gov. Barrows and Cong. Smith Find a Cordial Welcome On Knox County Tour

The issues of the Maine political campaign were discussed in a clear-cut and dignified manner on the Court House lawn last night by two men who are most familiar with the affairs of the State and the Second Maine District. One was his excellency Gov. Lewis O. Barrows, and the other was Congressman Clyde H. Smith.

They addressed an audience of about 800, and it was a noticeable feature that hardly anybody left largest in the history of the State. Old age assistance had been suspended because of the preceding Governor. The present Legislature framed a measure whereby 12,000 needy persons in Maine are now receiving assistance instead of the 4000 which had been getting it under the former administration. The Republican party has fulfilled its pledges in regard to Old Age assistance; and has produced more revenue for the department of education without any increase of the tax burden. Highways have received their surface treatment two and one-half months' earlier than ever before.

Gov. Barrows discussed briefly the ill effects upon Maine of Democratic reciprocity measures, mentioning among other things the fact that contracts have been entered into for the importation of 400,000 tons of Russian coal. "Things like these mean that we will have to expend more for welfare," said the Governor. "American markets belong to American labor."

The speaker told of the steps which Maine is taking in behalf of the valuable fish industry—with no increase in taxation. Improved methods of lobster propagation, surveys for the development of the shrimp, scallop and salmon industries were especially mentioned.

Congressman Smith said that the first thing for the Nation to do was to restore confidence. Speaking of the importance of the fish industry and the competition it was meeting from foreign producers, 32,000,000 pounds of all kinds of fish having

Rep. Cleveland Sleeper proved a vigorous presiding officer

Charles F. Dwinall and Representative candidates William T. Smith of Thomaston and Elbert Starrett of Warren.

"A man who doesn't run his campaign on promises," was the manner in which Chairman Sleeper introduced Gov. Barrows.

His Excellency opened his fine address with the declaration that the Administration had attempted to give maximum service on a minimum cost.

He told of the man who had promised governmental reduction of expenses and what has resulted; of the man now forgetting the dignity and authority of his office by running around the country and telling the people for whom they shall vote and for whom they shall not vote—opposing high officials simply because they had the courage of their convictions. To vote for the Democratic ticket in the coming election, he said, would be an endorsement of the New Deal policies. The pyramiding debt will create burdensome taxation for a long time to come.

Turning his attention to State affairs Gov. Barrows told how the present administration had faced a condition which could only be described as desperate. The continuing meat meant for a year had been exhausted in six months and the bonded indebtedness was the

"The Black Cat"

By The Roving Reporter

I never pass the Cleveland L. Sleeper residence at The Keag without calling to mind its former occupant, the late William H. Luce. Mr. Luce served a term as collector of customs for the Wadoboro District and had his office in the federal building. Thither I went frequently in the days when Custom House news was prolific, and I was not long in discovering that Collector Luce had a hobby. It was amateur poetry. I stayed in his office by the half hour listening to his latest offerings for he insisted upon reading them himself, possibly in order that he might better bring out their dramatic value. And many of his poems contained no inconsiderable amount of merit. I always counted "Bill" Luce a very good friend genial to a degree.

Speaking of local poets, there was Dr. G. Langtry Crockett of Thomaston, whose amazing memory was equalled by his witty and ingenious poems. Some of them were at the expense of local personages, but far from exciting wrath, they were always productive of mirth, and the "victims" conceded their merit. There will never be another Dr. Crockett. Even in cycles they do not run to men of his very unusual attainments.

When I think of the hours I spent in the collector of custom's office listening to Mr. Luce's home made poems, my mind always goes back to the many visits I paid to the office of Col. William H. Fogler, who became a member of the Maine Supreme Court by virtue of appointment by Governor Cobb. When I went to Col. Fogler's office, which was on the second floor of what is now the Woolworth block, and which was recently razed, my news errands received the courteous attention which was characteristic of the man and with hand on the door knob I would be in the act of departing. "Just a moment, young man," Col. Fogler would say, "have you ever heard this one?" Whereupon he would put aside his legal affairs and for perhaps half an hour regale me with some of the stories for which he was famous. Col. Fogler's portrait, an oil painting, hangs over the judges' bench in the Superior Court room—the picture of a man who gave his best to the Union cause, the profession which he followed, and the Supreme Bench which he was destined to occupy for too short a period. They make few men like Judge Fogler.

Last Friday night observant persons saw the atmosphere filled with millions of insects, which must have had very delicate constitutions for they perished almost the moment they alighted. From the grandstand at Community Park, looking westward toward the descending sun, I saw them drifting in an endless procession, and always toward the east. A year ago Sheriff Ludwick and I witnessed a similar phenomenon in "Pleasant Valley" at The Meadows. There were so many of the insects that they turned the atmosphere into a haze.

A former Rockland woman, now deceased, used to tell interested listeners of old stage coach days on the Knox & Lincoln route. Aunt Lydia's Tavern near the Warren-Wadoboro line was the half-way place and passengers were always served hot soup when they arrived there. It was also the place for re-warming soapstones which enabled the passengers to keep warm.

One year ago The Rockland Pirates were only half a game behind the Camden Shells in the Knox Twilight League race—Late summer catches of lobsters were the largest in years and pounds along the coast were rapidly filling. Olive Weaver was "Miss Camden" at the Camden Fire Department's first annual field day and carnival. Gardiner won the dry hose coupling contest.

They set up their trusty tent on the shores of Norton's Pond, having first ascertained by the careful reconnaissance that there were no painted warriors lurking in the forests.

The second day was devoted to fishing on the pond, but it was productive of little else than blisters, mosquito bites and sunburn. The ardor of the bluestocking pair from the Hub was somewhat dimmed, but sleep came to tired eyes and glowing dreams of the morrow's triumphs quite erased the day's disappointments.

And perhaps success would have crowned their efforts had not something else intervened.

Something else was a terrific electrical storm which thoroughly frightened the fishermen and the Indian hunters.

Let's go home, said the boy who had been thirsting for the blood of Sitting Bull's descendants.

What the fisherman said sounded a good deal like the echo of the youthful Kit Carson's words, but he put on a bold front and with the boy close at his side made a fairly dignified departure.

"I'll be down again," said the Librarian to his associate, Fred Green, who is betting a big cigar that he doesn't venture from the Library again this season.

And the Indians are free to pursue their atrocities.

The Final Concert

The Curtis String Quartet Closes Its Summer Season At Rockport

Before an audience of imposing proportions, including many distinguished musicians and a young American composer who was present to hear the performance of one of his works, the Curtis String Quartet gave their final concert of the summer season Sunday evening. With the presence of such a notable gathering and the atmospheric setting of the Captain Eells Boat Barn, there was an element of excitement which made the occasion outstanding. The new group for the programs called forth expressions of admiration—the outside cover now bearing a replica of the stunning sign set at the entrance of the grounds.

Again the members of the Quartet—Jascha Brodsky and Charles Jaffe, violins, Max Aronoff, viola, and Orlando Cole, cello, brought to their playing a devotion which combined with their native talent and exceptional training, marks them as one of the great string ensembles of the world today. There is always present exquisite tone quality and perfect balance, and it may rightly be said that emotionally and technically they are unsurpassed. It is an unforgettable joy to hear them. Their program for this final concert was:

No. 4 (Scherzo) Haydn
Allegro con spirito
Adagio
Menuetto
Finale
Two Movements from Quartet in B minor, Samuel Barber
Allegro appassionato
Adagio
Quartet in C major, opus 59, Beethoven
Andante con moto—Allegro vivace
Andante con moto—Quasi allegretto
Menuetto
Fugue—Allegro molto

Of the men of genius who have made the history of music illustrious, in contrast to those who appear stormy, tumultuous, deeply human, are those who though their role has been brilliant bear an aspect less harsh. Their names have been connected with some of the great periods in the evolution of music, they rank with the illustrious, but we can approach them without trepidation. We can sound their depths without feeling either trouble or disquiet, they are lovable and easy of access. Franz Josef Haydn stands in the first rank of these smiling figures with their restful welcome. His melodic vein is original and inexhaustible, often there is present a frank gaiety and extravagant fun. He is stamped as the first great master of the new instrumental style which reached its highest development in Beethoven.

To this standing as one of the great composers of all times must be added the marvelous fertility of his creative resources. The list of his compositions is enormous for example 125 Symphonies, 77 String Quartets, and so on—string trios, sonatas, cantatas and oratorios, compositions for harpsichord, songs, folksong collections, and endless array impossible to classify in meagre space. Of the B flat major Quartet, the adagio with its exquisite harmony and the finale with its ethereal quality, perhaps make the greatest appeal.

The Beethoven quartet is the third in the set dedicated to Count Rasumovsky, the master's Russian friend. It was composed in 1806. The first movement is remarkably clear and lucid in style, and finely colored in harmony. Indeed, it may be said that Beethoven is in one of his happiest moods. The exquisite Andante opens with a pizzicato bass and ends in the same manner; it is a highly finished movement. The minuet is of the stately dance order, and works into the remarkable fugue which Brahms played from memory as an encore at a concert in Vienna in 1867.

Beethoven wrote all his 16 string quartets after deafness had settled upon him. In connection with his affliction, it is said that he did not realize his growing deafness until 1802, perhaps for the first time when Ries with whom he was walking in the country called attention to a flute being played in the fields. Beethoven had not heard it and he was crushed. The shock must have been overwhelming for he speaks of it in the Testament some months later. It was perhaps not so serious to be deprived of the society of human beings, but at the thought that the voice of his best friend, Nature, should be lost to him, he gave way to despair. It would not have taken much, he says, to have made him put an end to himself, but by God's grace the creative energy was too imperious in him, and in the very hour of his deepest distress it overflowed. Four years more and Beethoven had hardened himself to a proud denial of his infirmity in the face of the world. His friends were careful not to let him see that they had noticed it, for that enraged him.

And so it went on until at last, grand in his defeat, he wrote in 1806 on a page of sketches for the finale of the Quartet, Opus 59, No. 3, the very one we heard Sunday night—"Let thy deafness be no longer a secret, even in thy art!"

Also in connection with his quartets it is of interest to know that the last of these compositions were privately performed by his "Quartet-in-Ordinary" at an hotel, and once in public. They were silently admired, but scarcely understood. The public was beginning to forget him and when his patrons arranged two concerts for him, no one who subscribed paid for his box, the Court did not put in appearance, although the members of the Imperial House had personally promised him to come. It is only within recent years that any understanding of his quartets has arrived, largely due to the fact that there have been so few ensembles with the ability to play and interpret them. This is one reason why we owe such a big debt to the Curtis group for bringing some of these quartets to us, permitting us to hear them played with an exalted devotion and thorough understanding.

Samuel Barber has held a note of particular interest for us in this section following his unique and charming recital in Camden some summers ago. Today Mr. Barber stands as one of the outstanding American composers, with several types of composition to his credit—orchestra, string quartets, songs, etc., and arrangements of songs from ancient manuscripts resulting from extensive research in many parts of the world. Prizes and awards have brought him many thousands of dollars and permitted him to make extensive study in the various branches of his art.

In addition to his great creative ability, Mr. Barber is an accomplished pianist and vocalist (barytone). Written in the modern vein as would be expected, the Quartet in B minor needs more than one hearing to be properly understood. It cannot be brushed lightly aside with one hearing, however. The amazing effects of harmonic combinations—and dis-harmonic, too, perhaps—are profound, the melodic glimpses are exquisite. The adagio movement held much general appeal. We have to admit it was strange company with Haydn and Beethoven and we wonder what those two masters would have commented could they have heard!

Mr. Barber who was present, in the gallery, was called to his feet by a gesture from Mr. Cole of the Quartet, and was given the tribute of spontaneous and enthusiastic applause which he acknowledged in a charmingly modest manner. Recalled many times, the Quartet included Mr. Barber in acknowledgement of appreciation extended by the audience.

Flood Of Memories

Brought To This Writer By Reproduction of "The Old Directory"

Editor of The Courier-Gazette:—

To those of your readers who have been away from the old home town, since the turn of the century, the publication of the directory of that period brings a flood of memories. Literally hundreds of these names recall incidents and associations far more indelibly impressed on the memory than a multitude of later occurrences of perhaps greater importance and significance.

In your latest directory how many are designated as "joiners"? I do not remember of hearing that word in the connection in which it is used in the directory since my early days when it was very common. With all of your various clubs and societies, there must be a lot of "joiners" in Rockland but the designation today would be more social than occupational.

Also the list contains "hostler." There cannot be many left. In all your roving, how many blacksmith shops do you see? Among my earliest recollections is the one in Union Common which was a center of attraction for the summer visitors, especially when they were shoeing oxen. There was a real job.

Do you remember when it took the stage a whole morning to go from Rockland to Union Common by way of Rockville, West Camden and South Hope? Compare that with the mileage you cover in a similar period of time on any one of your weekend roving.

Your suggestion that reminiscences from the antediluvians would be welcome falls on sympathetic ears. There is only one drawback? Where does one stop?

Waldoboro Withdraws

The Waldoboro team, which has been ill-starred from the beginning, gave up the ghost after Sunday's fiasco and has been replaced by Warren which has been itching to get into the League ever since the season opened. Warren agreed to take Waldoboro's standing, and will play the games for which Waldoboro was scheduled.

The double-header scheduled between Rockland and Waldoboro at Community Park Sunday did not materialize. The Lincoln County contender arrived 1½ hours late and the game was forfeited to Rockland. The second game was a rout for the expiring Waldoboro outfit, the Pirates winning 15 to 1. Rockland piled up 18 hits, while Waldoboro getting but four off Pendleton. The double-header at Thomaston Sunday afternoon resulted in a pair of tight squeezes. In the first contest Thomaston outthrew the visitors two to one, but lost by a single score. Heald and Felt did some nice work around the middle sack, while Libby, the new shortstop, again gave a fine account of himself.

The second game was very largely a pitchers' battle between Condon and Boynton. Camden tied the score in the last inning only to lose the game when Bennett dropped a fly ball and it became lost in the deep grass.

Where Quakers Sat

Mrs. Overlock Visits Old Chelsea Town Hall—Writes Interestingly Of It

Like the Roving Reporter, I went roving one evening recently and after a short shopping tour finally ended my trip at the old Chelsea Town hall where an old time dance was in progress. Saw and enjoyed several of the old time square dances, to the strains of Charles Overlock's orchestra. Mr. Overlock played the violin and prompted the dances, his daughter Josephine Finley played the piano, son Burnell the drums, with Alva Maddocks strumming the banjo for Boston Fancy. Lady of the Lake, Hall's Victory and Portland Fancy, and did young and old enjoy them? I'll say they did.

But in addition to the dancing I found time to enjoy most of all, the old hall itself which to me was a veritable gold mine of antiquity. To begin with it was built and used as a Quaker meeting house when Chelsea was a part of Old Hallowell. When the towns were separated the old meeting house was purchased and moved to its present location and used for years as a town house where Chelsea's voters met to discuss the pros and cons of town affairs. During the more recent years town meetings have been held elsewhere and the old building has been little used and the usual target for stone throwing by boys who like the sound of flying glass.

This year it has been purchased by one of the town's enterprising young men who plans to make it a popular resort for the dance public. The building itself is not large, perhaps 35x50 feet with three windows on either side, two on back and one in front, each window composed of 24 small panes about 6x7 or 8 inches in size, and over the front window and two front doors are very beautiful fan shaped finish, such as was used in the early years of Maine's settlement—truly a weatherbeaten old building that shows traces of Quaker simplicity and beauty. Inside is seen beautiful hand work in door and window casings and wainscoting of old pine boards more than 18 inches in width. Seats around the hall are made from the old pews. The doors both inside and out are paneled to form the cross and called Christian doors. The stage itself is made from the old high pulpit where no doubt many a pious Quaker sat in reverence to worship the Giver of all good. I wondered, as I gazed at that pertained to those bygone days, what those staid, stern folks would say could they look in upon the dancers who were enjoying themselves in such a different way with never a thought of what the hall was originally used for. To them it is simply "The Old Town Hall."

Arrived home about 12:45 after a pleasant ride and a pleasant evening "mid scenes of old" and "modern, too."

The Augusta Glass Club will hold an exhibition of Early American Pressed Glass at "Broadacres," the beautiful colonial home of Mrs. Horace C. Sturgis, on the Augusta-Waterville highway, today from 2 to 8 p. m.

Although this club is one of the newer groups in Maine, organized for serious study and appreciation of old glass, its members, and some of their ancestors, have been making collections for many years. Miss Ruth Hazelwood, club president, has lectured before a number of women's clubs.

More than 60 different patterns of pressed glass will be exhibited. Many of these patterns will be shown in table settings for two, four, six and eight, attractively displayed on colored linen, damask and lace.

commodities which are flooding our markets from abroad, with especial mention of the huge importations of hogs, eggs, wool, etc. Shipments through reciprocal trade agreements amount to $3,500,000,000 each year, and the balance of trade against this country is to the tune of $500,000,000 a year. The number of concessions on tariff rates favorable to foreign nations is 511. This must continue, according to President Roosevelt "to keep up the neighborly spirit."

Making brief reference to the wage and hour bill, Congressman Smith said: "I wish I had time to explain all the details in connection with it. If I did there wouldn't be a single laboring man among you who would vote the Democratic ticket."

"He never indulges in cheap politics," said Congressman Smith, referring to Gov. Barrows. "And he has placed more names on the old age pension list than are to be found in any other State of comparable proportions."

Called On The Folks

The Republican drive got underway early yesterday forenoon, first visiting informally the Underwood and Ramsdell sardine plants. At the latter place motion pictures were made of the party by Mrs. Fred Trearlin.

The noon hour found the party at the cement plant where Gov. Barrows and Cong. Smith met many of the employees.

At the Georges River Mills in Warren Barrows and Smith spoke to the employees about 30 minutes, finding a most attentive audience.

The 16 making the tour dined at Knox Hotel in Thomaston and visited the business district.

In Camden Representative Charles F. Dwinall awaited the party and this plan was repeated in Rockport. Supper was served at The Copper Kettle.

ERROR IN PETITION

Why Com'r. Greenleaf Refused To Repeal Closed Time at Jonesboro

Petitioned by a group of Jonesboro residents to repeal the closed time on lobsters during the months of July in the tidewater of the town of Jonesboro, Commissioner of Sea and Shore Fisheries Arthur R. Greenleaf said today that he had refused to act on the matter due to an error in the petition.

About 100 persons attended a hearing held at Jonesboro, he said. A small group of Jonesboro fishermen requested that Greenleaf's action also affect the waters around Rogue's Bluff. He said that a Rogue's Bluff group opposed this and that as such action was not mentioned in the petition, there was nothing that he could do about it.

HELP STOMACH DIGEST FOOD

Without Laxatives—and You'll Eat Everything from Soup to Ice

The stomach should digest two pounds of food daily. When you eat heavy, greasy, loose or rich food or when you are nervous, hurried or shy, your stomach doesn't digest and you have gas, heartburn, nausea, pain or sour stomach. You feel sour, sick and upset all over.

Doctors say never take a laxative for stomach pain. It is dangerous and foolish. It takes those little white tablets called Ballou's for Indigestion to make the stomach digest food properly. Relieves distress in 5 minutes and puts you back on your feet. Ballou's is so quick it is amazing and one 50c package proves it. Ask for Ballou's for Indigestion.

The new Lewiston radio station WCOU, operating on 1210 k. c., and owned by the Twin City Broadcasting Co., went on the air Sunday. Bernard R. Howe is general manager, and among the announcers is "Lanny" Pike, a Rockland boy, who has been with the radio game for several years. The WCOU Times had this to say about the Rockland boy: "Lancelot P. Pike, better known to radio listeners as Lanny, from nearby Rockland, first faced a microphone at WRDO in August, then migrated to WCOU and WORE in Boston, then to WDAE, Tampa, for the warm winter months and then on to WGAR in Cleveland. Lanny will be featured over WCOU as announcer and commentator of concert programs. During his college years at the University of Indiana, he was student announcer for college activities at station WOV in Fort Wayne. Even though Lanny's dignified, serious delivery before a mike might deceive you as to his age, he's a good-natured, easy-going youth, popular with his associates." Rockland was represented at Sunday's opening by "Lanny" Pike's parents, Judge and Mrs. E. W. Pike; his sister, Miss Ruth A. Pike; William Cross and Miss Ethel Pherson.

Won The Radio
Walter Griffin Gets Major Prize—Dollar Days Very Successful

The major prize of Rockland's Dollar Days contest, a handsome Delco console radio, fell to Walter Griffin, Hall avenue. The 5-piece breakfast set is the property of Mrs. Nina Gregory, Glen Cove. The picnic outfit went to Bobby Bourget, Broadway, and the electric roaster, donated by Central Maine Power Co. to John Mazzeo.

Other winners were: Tennis shoes, Boston Shoe Store, Mrs. J. B. Paulsen, Thomaston; tumbler set, Woolworth's, Merrill Morang; cookie jar, Woolworth's, Goldie Howarth, Camden; water set, Senter Crane, Joan Moulaison; three pair silk hose, Bell Shops, Ada Burpee; ladies' shoes, McLain Shoe Store, Mrs. Lorenzo Dodge.

Three pair silk hose, Cutler's, Norah Brown; perfume set, Mrs. Bertha Humphries; ladies' shoes, Endicott-Johnson, Mrs. Marion Eaton, Camden; salad set, Senter Crane, W. L. Clayter, Vinal Haven; cocktail set, Mrs. Shapiro, Limerock street; cocktail shaker, Corner Drug Store, Capt. Ernest Torrey, Rockport, table lamp, Mansfield-Buttner, Irma Pickett; 32 pc. dinner set, Senter Crane, Katherine Herbert, North Andover, Mass.; sweater, Willis Ayer, Mrs. C. H. Morey; ring, Newberry, Mrs. Clara Calderwood; sports jacket, Gregory's, Mrs. C. F. Gould, and basket of fruit, Perry's Mrs. Edith Bird.

Dollar Days, Aug. 9-10, proved the most satisfying in a decade to merchants and patrons alike. The charge has been made that the Dollar Days sales did not include 100 per cent desirable or seasonal merchandise, but Rockland stores dispelled such a fallacy with a vengeance as the advertisements in these columns last Tuesday and Thursday proved. They kept faith on values as well as quality and the result was thronged stores and streets both days. Satisfaction was so generally expressed that Dollar Days next year are a foregone success with probably much larger prizes.

Lions See All
Vinal Haven Club Hears Suggestions As To Promotion of Summer Trade

"See All," the delightful summer cottage of E. G. Carver, where Ed. once in a while has a chance to "get away from it all" was the scene of the bi-monthly meeting of the Vinalhaven Lions Club last Friday evening, and according to reports from the brethren and sisters (Yes, it was ladies' night), "a good time was had by all."

The program called for a gathering of those who had the time, (everybody had the inclination) to be there any time after noon, but about 3 o'clock saw the first Lions and Ladies on the spot.

At 6 a delicious supper of haddock smother and lobster was served by Host and Hostess Carver to the assembled 50 Lions, ladies and guests. After the meal a recess was called to allow some of the better fed Lions to get their breath back, and then the meeting was called to order by King Lion Drew and the business of the evening transacted.

The high light of the business was a letter from Dr. J. G. Hutchins of Camden, stating that a band of Roving Lions from the Main-Land would soon descend upon the fair island of Vinalhaven and that they were already roaring in anticipation. Accordingly it was voted to send out word to all the lobster catchers in this vicinity to have their catch available at a moment's notice, and it is the hope of the Vinal Haven Lions they can stop those roars a-borning.

The speaker of the evening was Joseph S. Hutchison of the Art Faculty of Wesleyan College, Delaware, Ohio and he presented his views on how to increase and promote the summer tourist trade for Vinal Haven. Having been interested in Vinal Haven for the past 11 years Mr. Hutchison had some exceedingly interesting suggestions and comment of this vitally important subject to the Islanders. At the close of his talk he gave a vivid description of the famous Hindu Rope Trick, which he witnessed on the streets of London, while a visitor there last year.

It was quite late in the evening when the last of the assemblage dispersed, and there was no dissenting voice from the statement that it was an ideal place for an outing.

Besides the members of the Club and their ladies the guests included Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Hutchison of Delaware, Ohio, Miss Amelia Lane of the same city, Miss Anna F. Huff of Brookline, Penn., Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Boman of Lisbon Falls, and Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Smith of Augusta.

Floodlight baseball was tried out at Community Park Saturday night before about 400 spectators, who saw the New York colored team defeat the Pirates 9 to 5. Grangers Met

Enjoy Fine Speakers and Program At Community Building

National and State Grange officers were guests of Limerock Valley and Knox Pomona at an assembly of patrons held at Community building Friday evening. The speaker was Charles M. Gardner, "High Priest of Demeter," the highest office of the Grange. His topic was "The Grange" and patrons who failed to be present, have lost a most important part of grange value.

Building of this great fraternity of a million members in good standing, and going strong, will celebrate its "Diamond Jubilee" in some New England city in 1941. Mr. Gardner has been coming to Maine since 1911 on lecture tours with the State Grange Master and has held his office since that time.

Character and sincerity the surety his, and his audience listened attentively.

State Master, F. Ardino Richardson spoke of the vast amount of work the grange has accomplished relative to taxation benefiting the farmer. The grange has taken an active part in legislation only as a benefit to the farmer.

A gorgeous basket of garden flowers graced the stage, a silent tribute in memory of the late Obadiah Gardner, who has done more to build the grange in Maine than

Seafood Dealers

Are Going To Fight "Frozen Spiny," "Frozen Rock" and "Lobster Tails"

Sea food dealers who are arrested on the charge of misrepresenting frozen sea crawfish as fresh lobster meat will no longer be able to fall back on a plea of ignorance in the future, as a result of a meeting of leading sea food wholesalers which was called by Director Alex Pisciotto of the Bureau of Weights and Measures, New York City Department on Markets.

A definite program of education of New York retailers backed by punitive action was agreed upon between the City officials and the sea food wholesalers have been registration of Director Pisciotto. The sea food wholesalers have been requested to attach stickers on bills and in circulars going to the retail trade as a warning against offering for sale frozen sea crawfish as fresh lobster meat, or to advertise or feature it as such.

In the opinion of the meeting, this would entail the proper labeling of "frozen rock lobster," "frozen spiny lobster," "frozen South African lobster tails" and other sea crawfish as such, instead of the practice on the part of retailers to offer these frozen crawfish products for sale as genuine fresh lobster meat.

This step, Director Pisciotto points out, is only in line with the intent of the Bureau of Weights and Measures to stamp out misleading and unlawful selling and advertising in New York City and is to be backed up with rules of the New York Health Department, which provide that all "frozen" products must be so labeled, and may not be sold as "fresh."

The Federal Pure Foods, Drugs and Cosmetics Act passed by the last Congress also prohibits dishonest advertising or misrepresentation of food products and has a direct bearing on this practice that has been general with retailers in New York.

One of the large sea food wholesalers who represents a group in the industry that supplies hotels and restaurants stated that he "would be highly satisfied if sea crawfish were not permitted to be sold except under the title of crawfish as the terms 'spiny' or 'rock,' coupled with the word 'lobster' only confuses the public and the trade." While The Federal Department of Fisheries permits these trade terms, the Fisheries Department of the Dominion of Canada is doing everything in its power to discourage their use.

It was the consensus of opinion of the wholesalers in their discussion of the problem with the officials of the Department of Markets that the food industry is suffering from the practice of misrepresenting frozen sea foods as fresh, a practice which they hope can be minimized or eliminated through the activity of the New York City officials.

REALM OF MUSIC

by Gladys St. Clair Heistad

The third volume in the "Rivers of America" series edited by Constance Lindsay Skinner, has musical interest, for it is entitled "Suwannee River: Strang Green Land." Its author is Cecile Hulse Matschat, and it is a Farrar and Rinehart publication. The book deals with that eerie and sometimes mysterious stream which is born in a swamp in Georgia and at length loses itself in the Gulf of Mexico, that river which is known best to us in the beloved tune given us by Stephen Foster. Mrs. Matschat is widely known as the author of books on plants, and in this work, when occasion arises to refer to herself and her adventures in the wet green wilderness of the Suwannee, she calls herself "The Plant Woman." She not only knows her plants, however, but is able to write of them with poetic feeling. Odd plants, strange animals, beautiful birds, curious primitive people are the materials from which she has shaped a book of great charm.

Stephen Foster's monument stands on the lower reaches of the Suwannee River, fitting tribute to the man who has made this river immortal. The history of the river is old, and back of the history are legends and strange tales. The birthplace is in the heart of Okefenokee Swamp, a vast terrible place which the Indians called "Land of the Trembling Earth." Mrs. Matschat traces its wanderings over a journey of 240 miles, and we learn that in this drowned and ghostly country live people, descendants of long generations of the English, who still speak the language of Elizabeth. In the great swamp are mounds built by some long-forgotten race. People live in shacks and cabins and, on festive occasions, sometimes bring out bits of linen and china which were brought here by their great-great-grandparents. They are extremely poor, Mrs. Matschat tells us, but have a considerable dignity and have not degenerated as poor whites have in other sections of the South.

MacMillan is bringing out a considerable group of musical publications this fall, the first Vincent Seligman's "Puccini Among Friends." Others are: "Music in My Time" by Daniel Gregory Mason, covering music in America during the past 40 years, presented in the form of leisurely memoirs, with sidelights on many interesting persons of the musical and literary world. During September, October and November will appear a series of practical reference books on music, compiled and edited by Albert E. Wier, which will facilitate score reading and fact finding.

Most important of these is "The Macmillan Encyclopedia of Music and Musicians," which will contain over 5000 references to persons, organizations, instruments, musical terms, and every other conceivable matter of interest to musicians and music lovers, from Greek music of antiquity down to the modern phonograph. "The Macmillan Encyclopedia of the Violin" will cover in one volume the history of the violin, biographies of great violinists and composers of violin music, articles on the violin, teaching, technique, etc., and a complete list of all important violin works. A similar volume on the Piano, will treat that instrument much in the same manner as the violin. That on Recorded Music will give concise, non-technical, critical information regarding more than a thousand masterpieces of music which have been electrically recorded. The final one is on Musical Instruments, giving information on instruments used in every part of the world, from the tom-tom to the vibraphone.

Two other musical publications, also by Mr. Wier will be especially welcomed by the musical world which has suffered long enough from the usual expensive and cumbersome scores: "The Chamber Music of Beethoven," containing 27 of Beethoven's finest chamber music works, and "The Piano Works of Rachmaninoff," in which 22 compositions for piano solo, piano duo and two pianos, have been selected and edited with critical notes.

Leon Zwasia has passed me the Hollywood Bowl Magazine, announcing the 17th Festival Season of Symphonies Under the Stars (July 28-29 inclusive). July 26 was known as Night of Opera and Ballet and offered "Cavalleria Rusticana," with Maria Jeriza singing the role of Santuzza and Irma Petina singing Lola (Do you remember Miss Petina in a Camden concert not so many summers ago), and the Serge Oukrainy Ballet in "The Dance of the Hours." The concert of July 28 was by the Los Angeles Philharmonic Orchestra with Arthur Rodzinski (under whom Mr. Zawisza played last winter) conducting a program of Russian music (Tchaikovsky, Shostakovich, Moussorgsky and Stravinsky); and the final concert was also by the orchestra with Richard Crooks, tenor soloist.

The program contains interesting notes of Pietro Mascagni. It seems that although Mascagni courted Lady Luck in the opera fully a dozen times, she smiled upon him but one, in 1890 when he wrote "Cavalleria Rusticana." Of course the Italian composer was fortunate in the choice of story and librettist for this opera, whose stage action is taken from one of the "Little Novels of Sicily" by that Italian super-realist, Giovanni Verga. Until May 17, 1890, Mascagni had had a dreadful time. As conductor of barnstorming opera troupes, he was hardly better off than by doing a little directing and teaching as he happened to be doing in 1888 when he decided on "Cavalleria Rusticana" as a good opera plot. He did not always earn $25 a month. He lived on a plate of macaroni a day—but fails to mention what his "faithful companion," his wife ate! He had been working at the big (and unsuccessful) opera, "William Ratcliffe" until he was convinced that a short work by an obscure composer had more chances than an elaborate one. Targioni-Tozetti agreed to do the book. Curiously enough, Mascagni's mind first centered on the closing moments of the work, in fact on the passage underlying the words: "Turridu is dead."

While walking to a neighborhood village from Naples one morning to give two lessons, these nerve-gripping harmonies came to him like a flash. The closing measures were thus the first to be penned in a score that seems to have come all at once as out of a mould. He next wrote the opening chorus, and the Prelude with the serenade of the tenor, was written much later, so that the opera, in a sense was composed backward.

Mascagni tells that having jotted down the gripping harmonies of the finale, he told his wife that he needed an alarm clock, because the next morning early he would begin to compose "Cavalleria Rusticana" in earnest. The clock was a luxury which they could ill afford, but after much bargaining they bought one for $2. It never served its purpose for that night Signora Mascagni gave birth to a son.

Word of Mascagni's plight reached Puccini who greatly admired his colleague, and who by being a little better off and already in the good graces of Ricordi, the famous publisher, tried to interest the usually far-seeing music merchant in "Cavalleria Rusticana," but for some reason or other, Giulio Ricordi, correct as his judgment almost invariably proved, made an error this time and turned a gold mine over to his competitor, the publisher Sonzogno. This purveyor of opera, in fact, offered a prize by way of an opera contest. Mascagni had hardly the money to appear before the jury to submit the manuscript score of his opera. Sonzogno sent him $20—part of which had to keep Signora Mascagni and her carbo alive. When Mascagni left Rome for home, he had not a penny in his pocket. But all that was to change soon, for Lady Luck of the opera had smiled upon the new music-drama.

Our Book Corner

James Weldon Johnson, who died in a grade-crossing accident at Wiscasset, on June 26, was the first Negro admitted to the Jacksonville (Fla.) bar. His career covered a number of different fields. He was for years one of America's most popular song writers; he served as United States Consul in Venezuela and Nicaragua; as secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People he was a leader in the fight for Negro rights for nearly two decades. His greatest fame was gained as a writer. He was the author of some dozen books, including "Fifty Years," "The Book of American Negro Spirituals," and "Along This Way," and his influence is generally credited with starting the great revival in Negro literature in the nineteen twenties.

Little, Brown & Company has just sent to press their usual 50,000 copies of the world's best selling book, Fannie Farmer's "The Boston Cooking-School Cook Book." The total printings of this classic now number 1,896,000, and of the latest edition 200,000.

Robert Lawson has done the illustrations for "Mr. Popper's Penguins," a delightfully mad and ridiculous book about penguins by Florence and Richard Atwater, which Little, Brown & Company are bringing out Sept. 26. Mr. Atwater is well known in the middle west as the former columnist of the Chicago Evening Post where he wrote under the pen name "Riq." Many people collect penguins. Roland Young, the actor, is a penguin enthusiast; so is Vincent Astor. A recent photograph from London shows Princess Elizabeth and Princess Margaret Rose taking a stroll in the London Zoo with Percy and George, the king penguins there, and in Shirley Temple's latest picture, em Pete, the Penguin, is one of the features. So really, no one should be mean and make fun of poor Mr. Popper and his devotion to his 12 penguins.

I have just read one of the most moving stories—"Precious Bane" by Mary Webb, a story of England's Shropshire. In fact, the story is laid in the country of north Shropshire—meres—the Ellsmere district, but the dialect is that of south Shropshire. It is the country of the Seven lowlands and of isolated upland ridges where Celt and Saxon have met and mingled for centuries. For the passing traveler, it is inhabited by an uncommunicative population dwelling among places with names like Stedment and Squilver and Stipstone, Nipstone and Nind. But to the imaginative child brought up among the ploughlands and pools and dragon-flies, there is "a richness on the world, so it looked what our person used to call sumptuous." It is this richness which Mary Webb, the author, saw and felt as a girl and remembered with lyrical intensity when a woman.

It is the story of dour Gideon Sarn against that of his gentle sister, Prudence, who tells the tale. She is a woman flawed with a hare-shooten lip, and cursed in the eyes of the neighbors until her soul's loveliness is discerned by Kester Woodseaves, the weaver. And so there comes to her at the end of the story love and peace. The book has natural beauty, tragic drama, and most of all a wonderful fusion of the elements of nature and man as observed in this remote countryside by a woman ever alive to the changing moods of both nature and man. "Precious Bane" is earthly beauty from one bit of the England of Waterloo, the Western edge, "haunted with the shadows of superstition, the legendary lore and phantasy of neighbors on the Border, differing in blood and tongue."

El Alexander Powell, noted author and lecturer whose book of reminiscences "Gone Are the Days" is just about to come from the press of Little, Brown & Co., was asked by his publisher what his personal tastes were. This is his answer:

"I like riding, shooting, fishing, Kipling, J. P. Marquand, Philip Guedella, horses, all but very small dogs, iced Chablis, mint juleps, soldiers, firemen and some missionaries, London, San Francisco and Peiping, caviar, Boston brown bread, Persian melon, brook-trout, Italian furniture, Sarouk rugs, gardens, all kinds of flowers, stream-lined cars, vermilion and sky-blue good landscapes, railway guides, steamship lists and maps, everything made of piskin, the editorial pages of the New York Times and the Boston Transcript, cottages set beside waterfalls or brooks, most New England villages, such movies as 'Benjamin Lancer' and 'Emile Zola,' brass bands and military parades, Capri, the Bernese Oberland, Scandinavia and the Italian Lakes, all historical works, museums, country roads, flowered chintz, stimulating conversation, red neckties, retired admirals and diplomats, small dinners provided they are well cooked and served, log cabins, the violin, bagpipes walled gardens, Spanish tiles, checked tweed suits, boutonnières of blue cornflowers, the Encyclopedia Britannica and the Statesman's Year Book, people with soft voices, good mystery yarns, palm trees, flying, open fires, a pipe."

This year the Old Northwest is celebrating the 150th anniversary of its organization. Historians and writers of fiction have been trying to recall to the minds of those who inhabit the crowded region stretching from Pittsburgh to Chicago, from Cleveland to Cincinnati and St. Louis, that only a few generations back theirs was a wilderness untamed and inhabited only by savages. Follows a partial list of such books appearing concurrently with the Northwest Territory Celebration:

Mainland, by Gilbert Selles.
Down the Ohio with Clark, by Charles Lender.
The Amerindians, by Donald McNichol.

The West in American History, by Dan Elbert Clark.

Black Forest, by Meade Minnerode.

The First Rebel, by Neil H. Swanson.

Oliver Pollock, by James Alton James.

Northwest Passage, by Kenneth Roberts.

Western Lands and the American Revolution, by Thomas Abernathy.

Advancing the Ohio Frontier, by F. E. Wilson.

Bucksburg Brigades, by L. R. Hubbard.

A-Going to the Westward, by Lois Lenski.

Frontier Ohio, by R. C. Downes.

The Ohio Gateway, by D. E. Crouse.

Meriwether Lewis, by Flora Warren Seymour.

American Frontier, by Elizabeth Peck.

The Ordinance of 1787 and Old Northwest Territory, published by the Celebration Commission.

Charles B. Driscoll who has taken up the pen laid down by O. O. McIntyre at his death, has written McIntyre's biography which is called the strangest "success story" ever told. Truant from school in Gallipolis, Ohio, never able to spell, given up as hopeless by his father, fired from half a dozen newspapers—and then the most widely read writer in America, loved by millions. It is from the Greystone Press.

THE FARM DOLLAR

Advices From 9000 Correspondents Show Its Purchasing Power 77 Cents

A slight increase in local market prices of all groups of farm products except grains raised the index of prices received by farmers to 95 percent of their pre-war level from mid-June to mid-July, according to the bureau of agricultural economics of the United States Department of Agriculture. The current index, however, was 30 points under the level of a year ago. Following are the average prices received by farmers on the products indicated, based on averages of reports from more than 9000 correspondents throughout the United States:—

What, 60.8 cents per bushel; corn, 53.7 cents; oats, 24 cents; rye, 41.1 cents; potatoes, 65.5 cents per bushel; hay, $7.11 per ton; tobacco, 24.5 cents per pound; hogs, $8.56 per hundred pounds; beef cattle, $6.74 per hundred-weight; veal calves, $7.88 per hundred pounds; sheep, $3.46 per hundred pounds; lambs, $6.84 per hundred pounds; butter, 25.6 cents per pound; butterfat, 24.2 cents per pound; milk, whole milk, per hundred pounds, $1.56; milk, retail, per quart, 10.3 cents; chickens, live, 15 cents per pound; eggs, 19.9 cents per dozen; wool, 18.7 cents per pound, milk cows per head, $56.70; horses $85.70 and mules $102.10 per head.

While the index of prices received by farmers now stands at 95 percent of prewar, prices paid by farmers, including interest and taxes, are at 128 percent of their pre-war base, giving the farm dollar a purchasing power of 77 cents.

According to the findings of the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, the rate of farm wages now averages 120 percent of pre-war, while the industrial wage level stands at 202.

WITH THE LARK

[For The Courier-Gazette]
When the swift daylight advances
Through mist of dewy haze,
With thought half waked from dreaming
Aroused by gentle maze of birdings in the open

And all life's blessed claim—
Up, 'tis the blessed hour
And the gods' clear urge
To conquer fate at flame!

Out in the open vastness,
Away o'er hills for release;
Look to the sky for conquest,
Look to the fields for peace.

Sky larks over meadows,
Linnets deep in greenest grass,
Tinkle of bells by the hedges
As sheep for their grazing pass.

Farm hands loading from tool sheds
Implement for their fray;
All life ready to conquer
The toils and joys of the day.

The Good Book frankly tells us
From whence cometh our strength,
Summer's the time for the open
When days are at full length.

So, up with the lark at daybreak—
Out to life's health and its power;
Seize pencil or brush and with magic Touch

Take toll of the beautiful hour!

THE BACHELOR AND THE SPINSTER

[For The Courier-Gazette]
He loves his life of smoke and ease
With none to nag at cough or sneeze,
He loves the little tiny tot,
So long as she is not his lot.

She loves his God, he loves all men,
But spare him from a matron hen,

I WILL NOT DOUBT
[For The Courier-Gazette]
I will not doubt my Father's care,
I know He hears and answers prayer,
I feel His presence everywhere—
How could I doubt?

I will not doubt that God will heal
When I to Him through faith appeal,
For only health to Him is real—
How could I doubt?

I will not doubt His way is best;
I'll trust and leave to Him the rest,
For all my days are truly blest—
How could I doubt?

BIRDS OF THE DAWN

[For The Courier-Gazette]
Nature's sweet singers inspired I hear
Knowing no sorrow and feeling no fear,
Glad that the night and the darkness
Are gone.

Thrilled with the kiss of the beautiful dawn,
Chicadees call from the trees all around,
Juncos are twittering close to the ground,
Sparrows' lit trilling in sheltering

Woodpeckers drum on some old oaken stub,
Orioles pipe from their leafy retreat,
Robins chirp lustily neighbors to greet,
Brightly tinted waxwings are whispering light.

Vireos vigorous clear notes recite,
Flickers are hammering loud far and high,
Warblers leap lively from tree tops on high,
Catbirds chat cheerfully nearer the sod.

All out of doors is a song sweet with God!

NOT DEMIGODS

[For The Courier-Gazette]
If you think our "New Deal" leaders
Know what all the answers are,
If you think they get their wisdom
From some remote twinkling star,
If you think they're superhuman
Built on a different plan,
Know best how to spend your money
What to choose and what to ban,
Then you certainly are riding
For a very nasty fall!

It's not written so in my book:
No one man can know it all.
We don't aim to do your thinking
But make note of what we say,
For they are only common clay,
And the money they are spending
Makes the Townsend plan seem mild,
They must think they're playing poker
Faker with the deuces wild,
Will you fall for honeyed phrases?
Can you by a smile be led?

THE POETRY OF TREES

[For The Courier-Gazette]
One wrote, "No poetry in trees."
No poetry in trees that stand majestic,
"straight and tall!"
Within deep forests o'erlooking all
Below, and shining through
A glimpse of heavenly blue?

No poetry in trees, when cool green leaves
Dance to the tune of a stirring breeze—
Merrily swinging to and fro—
In rhythmic measure they whirling go?
No poetry in trees when brown and bare
They valiant wrestle and bravely dare
Resist the Storm King's power,
Nor weakly crouch nor cower?

Poetry, use and beauty all combine
To make a tree a vision most sublime.

Seen in Rainbow

(J. E. Jones)

Washington, D. C., August, '38.—

There is a native thinker in Everytown who has come to the conclusion that if only 5 million people were out of work that the lazy would be better cared for, and if the additional 10 million who are now unemployed could be given jobs that the Nation's troubles would be over.

There is another native thinker in Everytown who is convinced that if everyone would start buying everything he needs that the 10 million unemployed who really want jobs would all be called back to work to supply what the professors and experts call "the demands of the consumers."

The native thinkers in Everytown are keeping their eyes on the same rainbow, and in the variegated colors they discover the end of the Nation's troubles.

A good old lady that I know keeps a little table of statistics of her own that show that most of the telephones, radios, automobiles, electrical appliances and other possessions to make life more cheerful are owned by Americans. She tells her friends that she "counts her blessings every morning." She grows old gracefully.

The thinkers in Everytown make their own personal surveys of fine streets, lined with shops and stores, and as they catalogue their fellow citizens and neighbors they are glad that they live in the U.S.A. instead of Europe or Asia.

The thinker who wants everybody employed cannot miss seeing and watching the moving streams of automobiles that constantly pass by his door. And when he looks in to his own car and considers how it came out of the line of science, skill and planning, he is confronted with material facts. The metal that comes first from the mines and steel mills and factories is in that car. And the machine is partly made of lumber from primeval forests, that was finished in mills and factories. It is partly glass, made from sand. It is partly leather, from the hides of cattle that graze on ranches and farms. It is partly coal, mica, clay, manganese, salt, sugar cane, wood-pulp, copper, wheat straw, chromium, turpentine, asbestos—that come from nature's riches in the bowels of the earth; or from the surface of the land, or from the laboratories and work shops where Yankee ingenuity produces its wonders. There is wool, mohair and cotton in the upholstery. There is cotton used as the basis of lacquers that give the car its rich coatings.

The thinker in Everytown who wants employment for 10 million people who need work is vocal in insisting that if all the great industries that contribute to making automobiles were busy, that the business of all the States that are affected would boom. If the cities and countryside boom, a thinker in Everytown visions huge waves of buying.

A few of the business "charts" are easy to understand. The easiest chart of all is the one that blocks off the months in a square with one waved line that shows how consumers are buying goods and products. Another similar line runs through the chart and shows how busy the industries are. The clearest chart is the one of the automobile industry; because the automobile industry is something that interests 30 million owners of cars. It is a National picture of local significance because stores, service stations, eating and drinking places, salesrooms, and
